

TRUGHANACY

Trughanacy is one of the 9 Kerry baronies, the origin of which dates from the 12th. century. The area in the map enclosed by the heavy black lines forms a portion of Trughanacy, an extensive barony, which ranges from Feakle and beyond Killorglin on the west to the Cork and Limerick borders on the east.

Trughanacy is comprised of about 20 civil parishes - as distinct from church parishes. Each civil parish is composed of a varying number of townlands.

To the north is the barony of Clannawee and to the south is Maguinity.

The civil parishes in the Castleisland area have been colour coded for convenience.

Parish	Acres	Townlands
Castleisland	29,609	60
Ballincushlare	39,737	47
Nehoval	3,204	13
O'Brennan	6,547	21
Brosna	11,959	20
Currane	5,221	14
Ballymacelligott	14,017	65
Dysert and Killeentierna	6,073	14
Killeentierna	8,959	27

Three Townlands in Killeentierna - Gortshafna, Reavoun and Rossanean, are in the barony of Maguinity.

The above information is based on Griffith's valuation of 1853.

The purple line shows the boundary of the Roman Catholic parish of Castleisland on the north and east. A part of Ahareboy is in Knocknagoshel parish. The boundary on the west and south is the same as that for Castleisland + Ballincushlare civil parishes.

This information is based on Rev. Kieran O'Shea's map of 1981 to celebrate the centenary of the church. Changes may have taken place since then.
